The Telephone Rings in a New Celebration

“Mr. Watson – come here – I want to see you” Those were the first words spoken on a telephone by Alexander Graham Bell. The first home phone was installed in April 1877, and it has since altered our method of communication.

The invention of the mobile phone further modified how we keep in touch with one another. Since telephones – of all types – are ubiquitous, Experian Simmons took a look at how phones have changed and are now being used.

Is the cell phone replacing the land line?

Not yet. However, as the chart illustrates, men are a lot more likely than women to switch their land line onto their cell phone.

Cell Usage: Business or Personal

There is a gender difference in cell phone use. Men are more likely to use a cell phone for business while women are more likely to use it for personal reasons.

In addition, it's Americans aged 35-64 who are more likely to use their cell phone for business purposes than for personal.

The next slide reviews which cell features men and women are using.

Are Cell Phones for Talking Only?

Long gone are the days when telephones were used solely for verbal communication. Today, cell phones serve multiple purposes besides providing consumers with a wireless telephone. A majority of newly-released cell phones have camera, MP3 player, and Internet capabilities; therefore, supplying consumers with the instruments to perform various activities on their cell phone in addition to making calls.

Below are the top three cell services/features women and men are most likely to use. Interestingly, the features most popular with men were the least popular with women.

Cell Service Most Used in Last 30 Days by Women	Index	Cell Service Most Used in Last 30 Days by Men	Index
Picture messaging	113	GPS/Navigation System	132
Camera	110	MP3/Digital Music Player	124
